Identify Volunteer Resources

Every person you know or meet is a potential volunteer. Make a list of 100 people you know and include their hobbies, talents, skills and interests. Start with relatives and friends, then acquaintances from your neighborhood, community and church, then follow with business and professional associates. Expand your inventory by asking friends and coworkers the following question: "Who do you know that would be good at _____?" (inserting the specific volunteer position that needs to be fulfilled or the skill or interest necessary to perform the role.) Enter the list in a computer spreadsheet database such as Excel so it can be reorganized and updated easily, or, keep copies of this sheet in a file folder labeled "Identify Volunteer Resources."
